

SAFE & LEGAL EDUCATION TRANSPORT

Is your student or pupil transport safe and legal?

© CTA Guilhem/Alandry

Find peace of mind by joining the UK's best source of advice on how to provide safe and legal transport.

School trips, educational visits at home and abroad, sports activities, adventure outings

There are a host of trips which you may provide for your pupils and students using your own minibuses or other vehicles. Whether you are a school, college or university you have a duty of care towards those you may be transporting – not least to ensure that you are operating a safe and legal service.

However, with the increasing raft of regulations governing transport provision, running a minibus is not as straightforward as you might think.

Are you up to speed on the following:

- Do I have the correct form of operator licence and, if not, where can I get one?
- Do I need to sit a new test to drive a minibus or am I covered by my existing licence?
- Do I need specialist training for safe minibus driving?
- What do I need to do before I can take a minibus to Europe legally?

The Community Transport Association has been answering these questions and more for a range of organisations, including the education sector for 25 years. Joining the CTA network gives you access to the UK's most authoritative source of advice and information on any aspect of transport provision outside mainstream public and commercial services.

Join us today and you will receive the following benefits:

- Access to free legal and technical advice that will answer all your questions
- Issue of Section 19 or Section 10b permits for members
- Regular information and advice on issues affecting education transport
- Help in developing and training your drivers
